'7-foot flying aliens' in Peru ate faces, claim locals. Cops say they were...

Terrified villagers in Peru claimed they were attacked by 7-foot-tall flying aliens. But cops suspect illegal gold miners are behind such incidents.

Last week, villagers in Peru were terrified as they claimed seven-foot flying aliens "ate faces" and attacked them. But now Peruvian law enforcement officials suspect that what villagers thought were the 'pelacaras,' (the face eaters) were actually members of an illegal gold mining syndicate hailing from different parts of Central and South America.

Locals had initially described the attackers as silver-coloured beings with enormous heads, who were impervious to the tribe's hunting weapons.

According to Ikitu, a group of indigenous people, this summer's 'alien' siege began on July 11, with locals facing vicious attacks by flying, 7-foot-tall mysterious beings in dark-colored hoods, as per a report by The Daily Mail.

The illegal miners attempted to kidnap a 15-year-old girl on July 29. The teenager reportedly sustained cuts to her neck and other injuries during the attempted kidnapping.

And another man was also reported to have been wounded in the head by the "aliens".

"They seem armored like the green goblin from Spider-Man," Ikitu leader Zvila told The Daily Mail.

"His head is long, his mask is long, and his eyes are half yellowish. With that they see you well and they leave," he said.

The officials claimed that 'seven-foot-tall aliens' were likely the gold mafias belonging to drug cartels like Brazil's 'O Povo Comando da Capital' Colonels 'Cave paintings discovered in Tamil Nadu could be 9,000 years old' Drowning in plastic' FARC, which ravaged Latin America for decades.

These jetpack-flying gold cartels are now trying to instill fear by spreading an 'alien' terror through their actions in Peru, as per the prosecutors. They claimed that these cartels aim at keeping the local people locked in their homes and away from the illegal gold nits of the cartels
